Faye Ling is an associate in Sotos LLP's corporate and commercial department. Her practice focuses on franchising and business law. Faye regularly advises franchisors, franchisees, and franchise associations on all matters relating to franchises including the preparation of agreements, acquisitions, dispositions, and the managing of franchisor-franchisee relationships. She has experience acting for clients in a variety of industries including fitness, real estate, grocery, hotels, and restaurants and has worked on a range of domestic and cross-border transactions.

A graduate of the joint JD/MBA program at Osgoode Hall Law School and the Schulich School of Business, Faye was involved in both schools' communities serving as the President of the Osgoode Women's Network and participating in business case competitions. She completed a summer secondment at a global media financier and articulated at a full-service Canadian law firm. She also possesses significant experience working with non-profit organizations and charitable foundations providing general legal advice on matters such as legislative compliance and governance issues.
